

Highlights

- Subjective and objective indicators about the economy have no robust effect on attitudes about immigration.
- Ethnocentrism is reliably the largest and most precise predictor of an anti-immigration opinion.
- Ethnocentrism has larger magnitude effects on attitudes against immigration than all economic indicators combined.